BaruchCOLLEGE Office of Testing and Evaluation

On behalf of the President, Faculty, Administrators and Students, we welcome you to Baruch College and our System. You are here today to complete your Baruch College Writing Placement Assessment, one of your next matriculation process. Your responses will help Baruch College faculty who teach First-Year Writing decide the course for your first term: ENG 2100 - Writing I or ENG 2100T - Writing I for English Language Learners.

A few notes about your assessment process:

- It is recommended that you use a desktop or laptop computer with a wired (ethernet cable) connection to avoid interruptions. If a wired connection is unavailable, please ensure that your Wi-Fi, cellular or other wireless connection is strong and stable.
- Use Google Chrome or Microsoft Edge to complete the assessment. Other browsers that will work are Mozilla Firefox.
- In order to access the Baruch Writing Placement Assessment, you will need to complete the Baruch College Academic Honesty Review first. You will need to score 100 points on the Baruch College Academic Honesty Review. If you do not achieve the required points during your first attempt, you may take it additional times.

The digital age, with its ubiquitous screens and instantaneous communication, has undeniably reshaped the landscape of human interaction. We exist in a paradox: more connected than ever, yet often feeling profoundly isolated. Social media platforms, designed to foster community, can ironically cultivate a sense of detachment, where curated online personas replace authentic, face-to-face encounters. While the convenience and efficiency of digital tools are undeniable, the enduring echoes of human connection, rooted in genuine empathy and shared physical presence, remain essential to our well-being.

One of the most significant shifts has been the erosion of nuanced communication. In the digital realm, we often rely on abbreviated text and emojis, losing the subtle cues of body language, tone of voice, and eye contact that enrich in-person interactions. This can lead to misinterpretations and misunderstandings, fostering a climate of miscommunication rather than genuine understanding. The ability to sit across from someone, to truly listen and respond, is a skill that risks atrophy in a world dominated by digital exchanges. The warmth of a shared smile, the comforting touch of a hand, these are experiences that cannot be replicated by a screen.

Moreover, the curated nature of online profiles often creates an illusion of perfection, leading to feelings of inadequacy and social comparison. Social media feeds are frequently a highlight reel, showcasing the best moments of others' lives, while concealing the struggles and vulnerabilities inherent in the human experience. This can foster a sense of isolation, as individuals feel they are the only ones grappling with imperfections. The genuine connection that arises from sharing vulnerabilities, from acknowledging the shared human experience of imperfection, is vital for building authentic relationships.

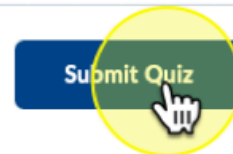

Despite these challenges, the human need for connection remains a fundamental aspect of our being. The desire for belonging, for shared experiences, and for genuine empathy transcends the boundaries of technology. We see this in the resurgence of community-based activities, in the growing emphasis on mindfulness and in-person social gatherings. People are seeking out spaces where they can connect on a deeper level, where they can escape the curated facades of the digital world and engage in authentic interactions.

The digital age has presented us with unprecedented opportunities for connection, but it also necessitates a conscious effort to preserve the enduring echoes of human interaction. We must strive to balance the convenience of technology with the vital importance of face-to-face communication, empathy, and shared experiences. By prioritizing genuine connection, we can harness the power of technology while safeguarding the essential elements of our humanity, ensuring that the digital age enhances, rather than diminishes, our capacity for meaningful relationships.
